

HAVEN

Four Residences Perfect For Leaf Peeping In New York City And Atlanta

by Haven Team

As summer shifts to fall, an amazing transformation begins. Witnessing leaves transform from green to red and yellow is something many across the country anticipate every year. While many head to rural environments for their annual autumn leaf peeping, cities provide skyscrapers with panoramic views of miles of surrounding fall foliage.

Atlanta and New York City are perfect autumn destinations for those seeking to enjoy the season's beauty in the city. The residences below stand out as particularly ideal for leaf peeping.

96+Broadway, New York City

96+Broadway is a stunning residence located at the intersection of West 96th Street and Broadway. This luxury condominium has a sleek look that the building's designer, Thomas Juul-Hansen, says was influenced by its setting, among other factors. "We took inspiration from the Upper West Side's incredible history but infused a modern approach that had convenience, luxury, and functionality at heart—which meant creating a multi-seasonal outdoor space for residents was pivotal," explains Juul-Hansen.

That multi-seasonal outdoor space includes an outdoor theater, lounge, and outdoor kitchen. The rooftop has been landscaped to provide greenery atop a concrete jungle and has incredible views of the Hudson River and the New York skyline. In autumn, the rooftop is perfect for viewing fall foliage along the streets below and across the Hudson's waters. The unobstructed views of Broadway and 96th Street stretch for miles and showcase the city's amazing fall colors.

