

LUX EXPOSÉ

Mother's Day is almost here, and Memorial Day is right around the corner — two perfect reasons to gather your favorite people for a fabulous meal. And if you're lucky enough to call one of these New York City residences home (or even dream about it), you know that a beautifully designed dining room can turn a simple get-together into a truly unforgettable celebration.

This spring, we're spotlighting some of the city's most stunning dining spaces — where incredible design, good food, and even better company come together in serious style.

96 + Broadway

And speaking of perfect spots for hosting, say hello to 96+Broadway, a gorgeous luxury condominium at 250 West 96th Street, designed by none other than Thomas Juul-Hansen. Perfectly positioned between Riverside Park and Central Park, this building brings nature and city energy together in the most stylish way.

Among its incredible lineup of indoor and outdoor amenities is a refined, intimate private dining room that's pure hosting goals. Outfitted with a grand marble table, custom ambient lighting, and sleek built-in millwork, it's the kind of space where meaningful moments happen — whether it's a fancy Mother's Day dinner or a casual get-together that turns into an all-night celebration. Plus, with the rooftop terrace offering almost 360-degree views of the New York City skyline and the Hudson River, you'll want to keep the party going long after the last bite
