Thomas Juul-Hansen's Boutique Upper West Side Condominium Unveiled

Nestled at the intersection of 96th Street and Broadway is a new 23-story, ground-up development designed by renowned architect Thomas Juul-Hansen. Dubbed 96+Broadway, the limestone-clad building will provide 131 residences ranging from one to five bedrooms, with model residences expected to debut this summer to coincide with the sales launch.

96+Broadway will offer residents three floors of dedicated amenity spaces, including a 75-foot indoor saltwater pool with wall-to-ceiling hemlock wood paneling; a hammam and spa suite; a fully equipped fitness center and Pilates room; a playroom; a game lounge; and a squash and basketball court. The building will also feature a landscaped rooftop terrace and outdoor cinema with lounge seating and an outdoor kitchen. Closings are slated to begin in late 2022.
